

July 13, 2006

Art & Photo: Best in Show

'Montezuma's Revenge'

Revisiting Pinocchio's journey into the whale's maw, a boatload of Disneyland tourists fades to black; only the bored guide in the stern, cascades of blond hair tumbling down her back, is aware of Bill Owens's camera. Three decades later, Justin Lowe plumbs vacation lassitude with a palm tree spray-painted black in front of a black wall on which "Welcome to Miami Everything's Cheaper Than It Looks" is scrawled in white neon. Aaron Young has masked out a large pale "$" on his tanned back (over a hairy coccyx) in the 2000 photo Tourist (Havana). Falk Haberkorn's black-and-white photographs of empty Venice tour buses broiling in an endless parking lot make a whale's belly seem positively inviting. Nicole Klagsbrun, 526 W 26th, 212-243-3335. Through Aug 18.